

Technical Wreck Diving

Join Woodbridge Scuba for Technical Diving June 18-19 2011

Some exciting diving on some wrecks that are seldom visited. Possibilities include:

Manuela: Freighter sunk by U-404 on June 24th, 1942. She was loaded with sugar and is at 150' to 165'- a sweet dive.

Lancing: This large converted Whaler is laying upside down at 160'. A great dive for the experienced.

Tamaulipas: A German torpedo sent this tanker to the bottom with 10,200 Tons of oil on April, 10th, 1942. A long way from the inlet, she rarely gets dived, but is a spectacular site with depths to 160'.

Diamond Shoals Lightship: The Diamond Shoals Lightship was sunk by shellfire from the German U-Boat, U-140, during WWI and lays in 180 feet of water just off the shoal that she warned mariners away from.

As always, selection of the exact wrecks is dependent on conditions.

Our dive boat – the Lion's Paw is pictured above. Specifications: Length: 42 ft Engines: Twin Caterpillar Diesels. Cruising speed in excess of 18 knots. Customized with your comfort and safety in mind. Fully enclosed and air conditioned passenger cabin.
